Series: The Fun Day Fairies

Book: Sarah the Sunday Fairy

Gobbling Goblin

“I can’t believe it’s Sunday already!” Kirsty Tate said, glancing at her best friend, Rachel Walker. They were in the Walkers’ kitchen, wrapping sandwiches in plastic bags. “My mom and dad are coming to pick me up tonight,” Kirsty added. “This week has gone so quickly!”

“Yes, it has,” Rachel agreed. “That’s because we’ve been busy looking for the fairies’ Fun Day Flags!”

Just then, Mr. Walker hurried in, carrying a large straw picnic basket. Rachel stopped talking immediately and grinned at Kirsty. Nobody else knew that the two girls had a magical secret: they were friends with the fairies!

For the last week, the two girls had been trying to find the missing Fun Day Flags and return them to the seven Fun Day Fairies. The flags were very important. The fairies used the magic in the flags to make every day of the week fun.

The trouble had started when naughty Jack Frost and his goblins stole the flags. When the flags’ special magic made the goblins only want to have fun, Jack Frost became so annoyed that he cast a spell that sent the flags whirling into the human world. But his mischievous goblins had missed having fun so much that they escaped into the human world to try to get the flags back. Of course, Jack Frost did not know about the goblins' plan.

"Let's hurry up and pack the food, girls," said Mr. Walker, putting the picnic basket on the table. "We want to get an early start so we can make the most of this sunny weather."

"It was a wonderful idea to have a picnic at Windy Lake, Dad," Rachel said, as she popped a plastic container of potato salad into the basket.

"And all of this food looks delicious," Kirsty added, looking at a large peach pie.

"Put the pie and sandwiches in last, or they'll get squished," Mr. Walker suggested as the girls added bottles of water to the basket. "Will you finish packing while I get the car out of the garage?" Kirsty and Rachel nodded.

"We only have Sarah the Sunday Fairy's flag left to find now," Rachel said, when Mr. Walker had gone.

"Yes but this is the last flag. So the goblins will be even more determined to find it first," Kirsty pointed out.
