A Nasty Nightmare

“Kirsty, help!” Rachel Walker shouted. “The goblins are going to get me!”

Breathing hard, Rachel glanced behind her. She was running as fast as she could, but the green goblins were getting closer and closer. They were grinning nastily, showing their pointed teeth. Now one of them had grabbed Rachel by the shoulder and was shaking her –

“Rachel?” Kirsty Tate was leaning over her friend’s bed, trying to awaken her. “Wake up! You’re having a nightmare.”

Rachel sat up in bed. “What time is it?” she asked. “I had a dream that there were horrible goblins chasing me and I couldn’t get away.”

“It’s seven thirty,” Kirsty replied, sitting on the edge of the bed. “Why were the goblins after you in your dream?”

Rachel frowned. “I can’t remember,” she said, sighing. “But you know what, Kirsty? I have a funny feeling that Jack Frost might be causing trouble again!”

Kirsty’s eyes opened wide. “Do you really think so?” She gasped. Then maybe our fairy friends need our help!”

Rachel and Kirsty shared a magical secret. They had become friends with the fairies! Whenever there was a problem in Fairyland, Kirsty and Rachel were asked to help.

The fairies' biggest enemy was Jack Frost. He and his mean goblins were always causing problems. Not long ago, Jack Frost had mixed up all the weather in Fairyland. But luckily, Kirsty and Rachel had come to the rescue.

"We'll have to keep our eyes open," Rachel agreed. "If the fairies need our help, they'll let us know somehow."

"Kirsty nodded. "Well, it's only the beginning of our school break, and I'm staying with you for the whole week," she pointed out. "So we have lots of time."

Before Rachel could reply, she felt a gentle tug on her neck. Both she and Kirsty jumped.

"What was that?" Kirsty asked.

Rachel looked at her friend. "You felt it, too?" Rachel looked down and gasped. The locket around her neck was glowing! "Look, Kirsty!" she cried. "Your locket is glowing, too!"

Rachel and Kirsty took a closer look at their necklaces. Rachel was right! The lockets were glowing with a faint pink light.
