

Series: The Jewel Fairies

Book: Scarlett the Garnet Fairy

A Walk on the Farm

“Time to get up!” Rachel Walker called, bouncing on the end of her friend Kirsty’s bed. Kirsty Tate was staying with the Walker family during their school break, and Rachel didn’t want to waste a single second.

Kirsty yawned and stretched. “I just had the best dream,” she said sleepily. “Queen Titania asked us to help the Jewel Fairies find seven stolen gemstones from her magic crown, and...” Her voice trailed away and she opened her eyes wide. “It wasn’t a dream, was it?” she asked, sitting up in bed. “We really did meet India the Moonstone Fairy yesterday!”

Rachel nodded, smiling. “Yes, we did,” she agreed.

Kirsty and Rachel shared a wonderful secret. They were friends with the fairies! They had had all sorts of wonderful adventures with them in the past – but now the fairies were in trouble.

Mean Jack Frost had stolen the seven magical jewels from the Fairy Queen’s crown. He had tried to keep the jewels for himself, but their magic was so powerful that his ice castle had started to melt. In a rage, Jack Frost had thrown the jewels far away into the human world. Now they were lost.

King Oberon and Queen Titania had asked Rachel and Kirsty to help return the jewels to Fairyland. The day before, the girls had helped India the Moonstone Fairy find the magic moonstone. There were still six jewels left to find!

“I’m glad the moonstone is safely back in Fairyland,” Rachel said. “And I had a great dream last night, so we know for sure that India’s dream magic is working again.”

The Fairy King and Queen had told the girls all about the jewels from Queen Titania's crown. They controlled some of the most important kinds of fairy magic. Every year, in a special ceremony, the fairies would recharge their magic by dipping their wands in the magical rainbow that streamed from the crown. But Jack Frost had stolen the jewels right before this year's ceremony. And that meant all the fairies were running low on a lot of their special magic.

"We have to track down the other jewels before the fairies' magic is gone," Kirsty said, getting dressed quickly. "Maybe we'll find another jewel today!"
