Wishes in the Air

"I wish this rain would stop," Kirsty Tate said to her friend Rachel Walker as they splashed through the puddles on Main Street. "My sneakers are soaked." She pulled the rainbow-colored umbrella she was holding farther down over their heads.

"Mine, too," Rachel said. "But I'm glad we came into town today. I got the perfect present for Danny's birthday party next week." She swung the shopping bag she was holding. It contained a bright red turbo-charged squirt gun that Rachel was sure Danny, her six-year-old cousin, would love.

"I wish I was going to be here for his party," said Kirsty, sighing.

"Me, too. I can't believe you're going home tomorrow," Rachel told her. "This week went by so fast."

"Too fast," replied Kirsty. "I just hope we find another magic jewel today."

The two girls grinned at each other. They had an incredible secret. Rachel and Kirsty were best friends with the fairies! They'd helped the fairies out lots of times in the past, when Jack Frost had been causing trouble. Now they'd been asked to help again.

This time, mean Jack Frost had stolen seven magic jewels from Queen Titania's crown. The jewels controlled special fairy powers. Without them, the Jewel Fairies couldn't recharge their magic wands! But Jack Frost had hidden the jewels in the human world and had sent his goblin servants to guard them.

RAINBOW magic™

Rachel and Kirsty had already helped five of the Jewel Fairies get their magic jewels back. There were still two gems missing — the sapphire that controlled wishing magic, and the diamond that controlled flying magic. Rachel and Kirsty had to find them as soon as possible. The fairies' special jewel celebration was supposed to take place the very next day!

"We need to find the missing jewels by tomorrow," Kirsty said anxiously. "Maybe we should start looking for another one now."

"But you know what Queen Titania always says," Rachel reminded her.

Kirsty smiled. "Don't look for magic – let it find you."

Rachel nodded. "I guess we just have to wait and see what happens. Let's go home this way," she said, pointing down the street. "We can walk past the mermaid fountain."
