Easter Bunny

“Isn’t it a perfect day for a party?” Kirsty Tate asked, looking up at the sapphire-blue sky.

Her best friend, Rachel Walker, nodded and handed Kirsty a chocolate egg. Rachel was staying with Kirsty for spring vacation, and the girls were hiding eggs. They were getting ready for an Easter party for Jane, Mr. and Mrs. Dillon’s five-year-old daughter. The Dillons lived down the street from Kirsty.

“There are some great hiding places here,” Rachel said. She gazed around the beautiful yard full of green grass and colorful flower beds. Then she knelt down and hid the egg under a shrub. “Jane and her friends will love the Easter egg hunt!”

“It’ll be fun,” Kirsty agreed, hiding an egg behind the birdbath.

“How many kids are invited to the party?” Rachel asked.

“Eleven!” Kirsty replied, her eyes twinkling. “Mr. and Mrs. Dillon are so glad that we’re helping out! They’ve been friends with my mom and dad for a long time and Jane is really sweet.” Then she lowered her voice. “Do you think we’ll find another one of the missing fairy pets today, Rachel?”

“I hope so,” Rachel whispered back. “Let’s keep our eyes open!”
