Rachel Walker smiled across the breakfast table at her best friend, Kirsty Tate. 'Yesterday was a great start to half term, wasn't it?' she said. 'I love our holidays together. We always seem to have the best adventures!'

Rachel was staying with Kirsty's family for a whole week over the autumn half term. The two girls had been friends for a long time, and yesterday they had made some new friends – the Music Fairies!

Kirsty nodded. 'It was so exciting meeting Poppy the Piano Fairy, and helping her get her Magic Piano back from the goblins. I loved it when...' She broke off suddenly. 'Did you just hear something?' she asked.

The two girls sat in silence for a moment, listening. Nobody, not even their parents, knew about their fairy friends, and they were careful to keep it that way. It was their most special secret. The two of them had been to Fairyland many times now, helping all sorts of different fairies and having some very magical adventures.

Kirsty and Rachel could both hear footsteps approaching – and another noise too.

'It sounds like bells,' Rachel said in surprise. 'Or a tambourine!' Her eyes lit up as she turned to Kirsty. 'Do you think it's a musical instrument?'

Yesterday the girls had discovered that Jack Frost had taken all seven of the Music Fairies' Magical Musical Instruments so that he and his goblins could form a pop group – Frosty and his Gobolicious Band.

Jack Frost was hoping his band would win the National Talent Competition that was being held in Wetherbury at the end of the week, but the fairies couldn't let that happen. If he did win, it wouldn't take long for people to find out he wasn't human. And once the world knew that the fairies really existed, all of Kirsty's and Rachel's magical friends would be in danger of being discovered by nosy humans!
