Listen to the Band

'I like that song,' Rachel Walker said pointing at the computer screen. She and her best friend, Kirsty Tate, were downloading music from the internet using a gift card that Rachel got for her birthday.

Kirsty nodded. 'Me too,' she said, clicking the mouse to download the track.

Rachel was staying with Kirsty's family for a week over the autumn half term - and so far the girls had been having a very exciting time. A very musical time, too – helping the Music Fairies find their lost Musical Instruments!

Mr Tate, Kirsty's dad, came into the room at that moment.

'I've just been talking to my friend, Charles, on the phone,' he told them. 'Kirsty do you remember him? He works at Wetherbury College and he's been telling me about a really talented band who have been practicing there. He's sure they're going to do well in the National Talent Competition tomorrow.'

Kirsty's ears pricked up at her dad's words. She and Rachel knew someone else who was determined to go far in the National Talent Competition – Jack Frost!

He was desperate to win the contest, he'd ordered his goblin servants to steal the Music Fairies' Magical Instruments, so that his group, Frosty and his Gobolicious Band, would sound the best.

Jack Frost wanted the star prize – a recording contract with MegaBig Record Company – but Kirsty and Rachel knew this would be a disaster. Once the public discovered that Jack Frost wasn't human, all the girls' fairy friends would be in danger of being discovered by curious humans!

'The band are rehearsing at the college,' Mr Tate went on, 'And Charles asked if we'd like to go along and listen.'

Yes please,' Kirsty said. 'We'd love to!'

Mr Tate nodded. 'I'll drop you there,' he replied. 'I can't stay myself – I've got a few errands to run.'

Rachel smiled and got to her feet. 'It'll be so cool if we get to see the winning band before the Talent Competition tomorrow,' she said. 'And you never know,' Kirsty murmured to her as Mr Tate went to get his car keys, 'we might spot another of the Magical Musical Instruments while we're there...'
