A Trip to the Sweet Shop

It was a lovely, sunny day, and Mr and Mrs Tate has set lunch outside in the garden. As Kirsty and her best friend Rachel Walker, sat down to eat, Mrs Tate suddenly groaned aloud.

'I knew there was something else I meant to get from the shops this morning,' she cried. 'Gran's toffees! I promised I'd take her some this evening and I completely forgot to buy them.'

Kirsty put down her sandwich.

'Don't worry, Mum. We'll go to Mrs Twist's Sweet Shop after lunch for you,' she suggested. She glanced at Rachel. 'What do you think?'

'Sure,' Rachel said. 'I've always got time to go to the sweet shop!' The two girls smiled at each other.

Rachel was staying at the Tates for a whole week. She and Kirsty had met one summer holiday, and they have been friends ever since. Somehow whenever the pair of them got together, they always seemed to have the most wonderful adventures. Fairy adventures!

'That reminds me,' Mr Tate said. 'I saw in the local newspaper that Mrs Twist is retiring. Her daughter's taking over the sweet shop from tomorrow. As this is her last day, Mrs Twist is throwing a party for all her customers.' He winked at Kirsty and Rachel. 'I read something about there being plenty of free sweets up for grabs, too!'

Kirsty nudged Rachel at once. 'Sweets and a party,' she repeated. 'How exciting!'

'We love parties,' Rachel agreed, with a grin.
