Easter Bunny

'Isn't it a lovely day for a party?' Kirsty Tate said, looking up at the sapphire blue sky.

Her best friend, Rachel Walker nodded and handed Kirsty a chocolate egg. Rachel was staying with Kirsty for the holidays and the girls were hiding Easter eggs ready for an Easter party for Jane, Mr and Mrs Dillon's five-year-old daughter.

'There are some great hiding places here,' Rachel said, grazing around the beautiful big garden with its green lawns and colourful flowerbeds. She knelt down and hid the egg under a shrub. 'Jane and her friends will love the Easter egg hunt!'

'It'll be fun,' Kirsty agreed, hiding an egg behind the birdbath.

'How many children are invited to the party?' Rachel asked.

'Eleven!' Kirsty replied, her eyes twinkling. 'Mr and Mrs Dillon are very please that we've come to help out! They've been friends with my mum and dad for ages, and Jane is sweet.' Then she lowered her voice. 'Do you think we'll find another of the missing pets today, Rachel?'

'I hope so,' Rachel whispered back. 'Let's keep our eyes open!'

Rachel and Kirsty had a special secret: they were friends with the fairies!

Wherever there was trouble in Fairyland, the girls were always happy to help, and trouble usually meant that the mean Jack Frost and his goblin servants were up to no good.

This time Jack Frost had been angry that he didn't have a pet of his own, so he kidnapped the seven magical animals belonging to the Pet Keeper Fairies.
