Party in Fairyland

'Race you to that rock pool, Kirsty!' Rachel Walker yelled to her best friend, Kirsty Tate.

'You're on!' Kirsty replied.

Laughing, the two girls raced across the beach. Rachel reached the pool first, but Kirsty was right behind her.

'Your gran's lucky to live in Leamouth,' Rachel panted, gazing around the sandy bay. 'It's lovely.'

Kirsty nodded. Leamouth was a pretty fishing village with winding streets and a harbour filled with boats. Kirsty's gran lived in one of the cottages on the cliff, near the beach.

'I always have fun her,' said Kirsty. 'I'm glad you could come this time.'

'Thanks for inviting me,' Rachel replied.

The two girls wandered down to the sea. The waves lapped at their flip-flops, but as the water slid back it left a large seashell on the sand, right in front of them.

Rachel picked it up. 'It's beautiful,' she said. 'Look!'

As Kirsty looked, a burst of aquamarine sparkles suddenly fizzed out of the shell, making Rachel jump.

‘Fairy magic!’ Kirsty gasped.

The girls glanced excitedly at each other. Their friendship with the fairies was a very special secret.

The faint tinkle of bells and soft music floated out of the shell. Quickly, Rachel held it up so that she and Kirsty could listen.

‘Hello, girls,’ said a silvery voice.

Rachel grinned at Kirsty. ‘It’s the Fairy Queen!’ she exclaimed.

‘We’d like to invite you to a special beach party – a luau – to celebrate summer,’ the Queen went on. ‘If you’d like to come, just place the shell on the sand, right now. We hope you can join us...’ The Queen’s voice faded away.

With a quick glance round to make sure nobody was watching, Rachel placed the seashell on the sand. Immediately, a dazzling rainbow sprang from the shell, its colours bright in the sunshine.

‘Let’s go, Kirsty!’ Rachel whispered.
