Football Fun

'You look great, Dad!' Rachel Walker laughed, glancing at her father as she climbed out of the car. Mr Walker was wearing a blue and white football shirt and scarf, his face was painted with blue and white stripes,, and he had a fluffy blue and white wig on his head.

'The wig's fantastic!' Kirsty Tate, Rachel's best friend, added with a grin. She was staying with the Walkers over the spring holiday. 'He's going to be the best-dressed Tippington Rovers supported here.'

Rachel nodded. 'I'm glad Mum and I are just wearing scarves though,' she added. 'That wig looks big and hot!'

'It is but I want to show my support for the team,' said Mr Walker, as they left the car park and joined the other football fans heading towards the Cooke Stadium. 'This is a very important match, girls. If Tippington beat Alton United today, the team will be promoted to the next league!'

Rachel and Kirsty exchanged concerned glances. They both worried that the football match would be a complete disaster, because the Sparty Fairies had lost their Magic Sparty Objects.

When the special objects were in their proper places, with the Sparty Fairies or in the fairies' lockers,, they made sure that sport in both the human and fairy worlds was safe, fun and exciting. Unfortunately, they'd been stolen by cunning Jack Frost and his goblin servants.

Jack Frost was determined to win the Fairyland Olympics, which started in six days time, and so he'd ordered his goblins to hide the objects away in the human world until the games took place.
