

Series: The Weather Fairies

Book: Pearl the Cloud Fairy

Missing Fidget

‘What’s the weather like today, Kirsty?’ asked Rachel Walker eagerly. She pushed back the duvet. ‘Do you think there’s magic in the air?’

Kirsty Tate was standing at the bedroom window, staring out over the garden. ‘It seems like an ordinary day,’ she sighed, a disappointed look on her face. ‘The sky is grey and cloudy.’

‘Never mind.’ Rachel jumped out of bed, and went to join her friend. ‘Remember what Titania, the Fairy Queen, told us. Don’t look too hard for magic-’
‘Because the magic will find you’” Kirsty finished with a smile.

Rachel and Kirsty were good friends who shared a very special secret. They were best friends with the fairies! When Jack Frost had put a spell on the seven Rainbow Fairies, scattering them far and wide, Rachel and Kirsty had helped them to return to Fairyland. Now Jack Frost was up to mischief again – this time with the Weather Fairies. And once more, the Fairy King and Queen had called on Rachel and Kirsty for help.

‘Look at Doodle.’ Rachel pointed at the cockerel weather vane, which sat on top of the old barn. ‘Don’t you think he looks a bit happier, now that he’s got two of his tail feathers back?’

Kirsty nodded. ‘Let’s hope we find all his feathers before you go home,’ she replied. ‘Then the weather in Fairyland can get back to normal again!’

With his seven magic tail feathers and the help of the Weather Fairies, Doodle the Cockerel controlled Fairyland’s weather. But Jack Frost had sent his mean goblin servants to steal poor Doodle’s feathers. Doodle chased the goblin thieves into the human world- but without his magic, and away from Fairyland, he found himself transformed into an ordinary, rusty weather-vane!

Kirsty’s dad had found him lying in the park, and brought him home to put him on the roof of the barn-never realising what a magical creature Doodle really was!
